THE CITY.

Improving.

Lung, who was shot by Chas. Cole, last Friday evening, is improving, and will not die, as some have insinuated.

Board of Health.

The Board of Health meets to-night in their chamber on Sixth street, at eight o'clock.

Esther.

The oratorio of Esther will be repeated at Weisiger Hall, on Friday evening next, for the benefit of the Broadway church.

Street Music.

Two old dandies amused a crowd of tickled spectators on the corner of Walnut and Third streets, this morning, with two fiddles, which they played with much spirit and animation.

Good One on a Reporter.

A lawyer in the District Court this morning mistook "our reporter" for a barker, and wanted to have him sworn as a witness in the Moore-Stimmen case. Community is unnecessary.

Speaking in Portland.

Dr. O. S. Leavitt will deliver a lecture on the public finances at "Newhall's," in Portland to-night. The Doctor will review the plans of Secretary Boutwell in his address to-night.

The Masonic Picnic.

All Masons who intend to participate in the grand picnic to be given by the order on the 24th can obtain passes to ride on the occasion from Major Barrow, on Market street, between Second and Third.

Lost! Lost! Lost!!

Is the inscription pinned on a dilapidated glove indicating the entrance of a law office on Jefferson street. It looked like a "gem of countless price" to nobody.

To be Continued.

The heavy shower last evening put a damper on the Celtic Literary Association picnickers at Woodland Garden. The festivities will be continued to-day at the same place. All who attended yesterday had a real nice time.

The New Steamer "Ben Franklin."

It is thought that the Cincinnati mail line company's new packet, "Ben Franklin," will be completed in time for a grand trial trip and excursion on the Fourth of July. This boat will be one of the finest ever turned out of our shipyards.

United States District Court.

The case of J. Milt. Moore vs. F. W. Stimmell and others, which was commenced in this court day before yesterday, still drags slowly along, with little prospect of a conclusion to-day. Moore wants $30,000 damages from Stimmell for an alleged infringement on his patent for making light-bread.

The Rink.

This is the last week of the season at this popular place of amusement. Mr. Fenton remains but three nights more, and all who have not visited the rink should avail themselves of the opportunities to witness his graceful movements on the rollers. The evening and afternoon assembly for instruction will be continued as usual for a short time.

Peace Warrant.

Susan Hughes, a colored girl, went to a party, about a mile from the city, last Saturday night. Charles Churchill, alias Seaman, alias Jackson, went to the same party. He asked Susan to dance with him. Susan refused. Charles knocked Susan down for her refusal, and this action on Charles' part took him before Squire Clement. His case was not decided when he left.

A Fine Distillery.

T. H. Sherley, commission merchant and dealer in Kentucky whiskies, advertises his card in another column. Mr. Sherley's distillery is near the city, and under charge of the veteran distiller Jacob Laval, whose thirty years' experience guarantees the very finest whisky. Care is taken that none but the best grain is used, and hence this whisky stands No. 1 in the trade. Mr. Sherley will take pleasure in accommodating any person who may wish to visit his distillery, if they will call at his office.

Fourth of July Excursion.

An excursion to Mount Vernon, Ind., and return is proposed. The good steamer Morning Star, Captain Gilmore, will leave here on Friday, July 2d, for the above place and reach here on the return trip on Monday morning, at 4 o'clock. A large number of ladies and gentlemen have also signed their intention to participate, and what, with the pleasant company and fine music and high living, this will be one of the pleasantest of the various excursions by which it is intended to celebrate the glorious 4th. Chris. Haupt's band is engaged. The Morning Star will leave the Portland wharf at 5 p. m. Friday.

TRIUMPHANT EXCITEMENT.

Two Germans Drink Beer for the Championship of the Falls.

A plentiful sprinkling of beer breweries and beer gardens exist in our city's suburbs, a fact known and appreciated by not a few, and many of our most respectable German citizens are wont to find comfort and solace in a social glass or two of their native beverage at the above-named places almost nightly. An impromptu incident that occurred at one of these gardens, a few evenings since, has been related to us by a Teutonic friend, and we consider it good enough to print. If not of any greater importance to the public, it will serve to prove the capacity of some human stomachs.

A FRIENDLY MEETING.

Two friends, whom, for convenience, we will call Hans and Gotlieb, happened to meet in a beer garden shortly after sunset. Both possessed, in a full degree, the true German joviality and good humor. After sipping one glass of lager quietly together, Hans exclaimed: "Gottlieb, I bets vot I can drink so much more lager as you."

Gotlieb—"Nein, nein, Hans, I thinks you can do it."

Hans—"Vell, now, we try's him."

Gotlieb—"De one vot gets beated pays for the whole."

Hans—"Dos be all right."

Both (very loud)—"Hier, von waiter, bring in, make quick, ein keg beer!"

THE TRIAL BEGINS.

Both made ready for the contest by stripping off coats, hats, neckerchiefs and rolling up their sleeves to their elbows. A fresh keg of beer was placed on a chair near by and tapped; judges were chosen, two men employed to draw the beer, and another to keep tally on a piece of paper. The word "ready" was given and they went at it. One, two, three, up to six "schuppers" are drained almost as fast as they could be drawn from the keg.

QUARTER FULL.

The drinking becomes more deliberate. Hans is confident of an easy victory, leans back in his chair, stretches out his legs at full length, and assumes a cool air as he sips his eighth glass. Gotlieb, weary of his adversary's tactics, stands erect while he pours down his seventh; then resumes his chair and leisurely tackles his eighth.

HALF FULL.

The ninth and tenth are emptied by Hans slowly, he being two minutes ahead, and confident as at the start. Gotlieb's friends offer words of encouragement, and under the soothing influence of their words gets his tenth down with some exertion. Time, fifteen minutes. Betting about even.

THREE-QUARTERS FULL.

The movements of the men now became very deliberate and cautious. Both took their eleventh glasses fondly in their hands and gazed through them as if expecting to see something encouraging by the operation. Five minutes were thus consumed, then a spasmodicgulp, both glasses were drained. The twelfth and thirteenth were disposed of in about the same manner.

FULL.

The contestants indulged in a brief conversation previous to the commencement of the fourteenth round. Finally, fixing their eyes upon each other, the fourteenth and fifteenth were moderately drunk down, with some evidences of gurgling. Time, three-quarters of an hour.

FULLER.

The clock struck ten, but the two "knights of the beer" still stuck to business. They evinced no inclination to be in a hurry about it, however. Hans looked at Gotlieb and Gotlieb looked at Hans; then they both took a look at the sixteenth glass, which they held firmly in their hands. "By tam, I beat 'im," Hans was heard to mutter, and with some effort he drained his glass. Gotlieb tried to follow suit, but was finally compelled to set his glass only half-emptied upon the table. Hans, perceiving this, grasped his seventeenth glass with an earnestness almost fatal to glass and contents. With one masterly struggle, Hans was outside of his seventeenth.

FULLEST.

"Two to one on Hans!" went up from all parts of the crowd. Gotlieb had nearly finished his sixteenth, but it suddenly dropped to the ground, and in feeble voice these words escaped his lips, "I cool drinkie no more." He then sank into unconscious oblivion. Hans, who had persuaded down about two-thirds of his eighteenth glass, when he saw that he had won the victory, looked up exultantly at the bystanders and exclaimed in broken syllables, "Himmel! by tam! if I vas bin ty amore vonce, I cool drinkie de whole keg." He then fell heavily alongside of Gotlieb amid the exultant cries of his friends. He was decided at once to be the champion beer-drinker of the falls.

Woodland Yesterday.

The Celtic Literary Association picnic at Woodland Garden yesterday was a most pleasant affair. Until about 5 o'clock in the afternoon nothing happened to mar the good humor and social feeling that prevailed. About this time a gentleman was standing in a set that had been formed for a quadrille, with a lady by his side. Another man stepped up and said he had a notion to take the gentleman's partner from him. The notion grew into a determination, and he did induce the lady to leave the gentleman's side and go with him. This, of course, was the signal for a row. The first gentleman called the second aside, and after a brief conversation, knocked him down. That settled it, and there was no further disturbance.

Concert.

The concert to be given by the choir of the Shelby-street M. E. Church takes place to-night at Good Templars' Hall, corner of Main and Clay streets. The programme is a good one, and well worth the price of admission. The proceeds of the affair will be appropriated to the choir and Sabbath school.

Fourth of July Excursion.

An excursion to Mount Vernon, Ind., and return is proposed. The good steamer Morning Star, Captain Gilmore, will leave here on Friday, July 2d, for the above place and reach here on the return trip on Monday morning, at 4 o'clock. ## A "JUBILEE."

After the Style of that Held at the "Hub."

On Jackson street, between Green and Jefferson, is located a colored church. In this church Africa has been letting himself and herself "loose" every night for some weeks past. A "jubilee" is being held in this edifice but little behind, in point of noise and harsh musical discord, to the great musical humbug in the "Hub" in Massachusetts. Each night Africa assembles at this church, and the trombone, cracked bassoon, and other minor horns, are blown to a fullness of tone perfectly terrific and terrifying to the peaceably inclined white citizens who live within a radius of one mile to this church. During the early part of the night, that is, about eleven o'clock, the "jubilee" is composed of busted notes from the aforesaid minor instruments; but a few hours later the mammoth drum (a fair imitation of that used in Boston) is brought forth. Two strap-ping big darkies perform on it, one on each side. This part of the programme consumes the rest of the time allotted for each night. The "jubilee" lasts till two o'clock in the morning. Just before the close a pandemonium chorus is given for the benefit of outsiders, including the suffering white citizens in the neighborhood, who, perhaps, have been trying to get to sleep since ten o'clock.

THE CLEM CASE.

THE SUPPRESSED TESTIMONY.

Cal. Bowen's Statements to the Grand Jury.

How She was Forced to Personate Mrs. Clem.

Startling Developments.

From the Indianapolis Sentinel.

The order issued by Judge Chapman in the Marion Criminal Circuit Court, Saturday last, removing the seal of secrecy from the transactions of the grand jury in their investigation of the Young murder case, enables us to lay before the readers of the Sentinel this morning some of the facts and testimony that were not brought to public light during the two trials of Mrs. Clem.

On the three occasions that Mrs. Clem was before the jury prior to her arrest, she positively denied acquaintance with the Youngs; that she had been in any way connected with Jacob Young in business transactions, or that she had visited his house for any purpose or on any occasion whatever. At each investigation she made contradictory statements as to her whereabouts on the day of the murder, none of them agreeing with the alibi set up for her defense when she was brought to trial.

After the arrest of Mrs. Clem, a strong effort was made on the part of the defense to implicate William Fiscus and Caroline or "Cal" Brown. Fiscus was arrested and taken before the jury, where he made a detailed statement of all of his movements on the day of the tragedy, naming a number of persons he came in contact with on that day. The persons he mentioned were all summoned, and their testimony fully corroborated that of Fiscus, who was honorably acquitted and discharged from arrest by the jury.

Cal Bowen was before the jury twice, once during the first investigation of the case and just previous to the trial of Mrs. Clem. On both occasions she testified that she had been taken in custody by Mike Scudder, at that time city deputy marshal, who took her to the house of Col. Robinson, where every effort, by means of cajolery, bribes and threats was made to induce her to acknowledge complicity in the murder. She resisted all their efforts to that end and was then placed in a buggy with Scudder and Robinson, who first proposed to take her to the jail and then threatened her with severe punishment if she made any resistance to their proceedings. They then drove to the houses of John Harbert, Perry Todd and John H. Wiley, to whom she was introduced as the wife of Scudder, but all denied ever having seen her before, or that she at all resembled the woman whom they saw in the buggy with the Youngs the day of the murder.

After taking her out to the scene of the murder where still further efforts, by threats and force, were made to compel her in some way to commit herself, she was brought back to the house of Colonel Robinson and kept under guard for about two days, Peter Wilkins acting as her jailer. During this time she was visited by a person who was introduced to her as Mr. Wallace, but who since learned was Mr. Leathers, one of the attorneys for Mrs. Clem. This Mr. Wallace repeatedly endeavored to obtain her signature to a paper which he offered to read to her, but which he refused to let her read herself, and on one occasion held her hand down on the paper in an effort to make her sign it. From Robinson's she was taken to the jail, where she staid one night, and after being examined by the grand jury, was released.

Cal Bowen was not used as a witness in either trial, and it was strongly suspected that she was induced to leave the city, so that the State could not use her on the first trial. Her testimony before the grand jury was in the possession of a gentleman who is absent from the city, or it would have appeared in full in this connection. She returned to the city, and was in attendance during the progress of the second trial, but was not used, it being considered that she was still admissible, excepting under certain contingencies that did not arise in the defense. For a while after these occurrences she made a great bluster, threatening suit, laying damages at sixty thousand dollars, against Robinson and Leathers for false imprisonment, but has now quieted down.

During the progress of the first trial of Mrs. Clem, it was discovered that an important witness for the State was missing just at the particular moment he was needed. Rumors of some foul dealings having led to the disappearance of the witness John Pierson, who testified, both before the jury and on the witness stand at the trial, to having seen Syke Hartman and Mrs. Clem coming in from the direction of Cold Springs about four o'clock on the afternoon of the murder, driving the sorrel mare "Pet," were soon circulated and obtained general credence. The members of the grand jury, who were all positive the right persons had been found and that they had returned true bills, were smarting under the reflection of a hung jury through the loss of such positive testimony, and instantly set vigorously to work to make a most searching investigation of the facts.

After examining a large number of witnesses, Peter Wilkins was brought before the jury and identified as the man who had left a note and some money at the house of Pierson's mother in Shelly county. On Monday, March 1st, the jury having been out since the Saturday previous, brought in a verdict against Mrs. Nancy E. Clem, indicted for the murder of Mrs. Nancy Jane Young of murder in the second degree, with sentence of imprisonment for life. This verdict seemed to determine her brother, Silas Hartman, who was jointly indicted with her, to make an effort to save his sister from the doom awaiting her, and after several attempts he succeeded in having himself taken before the grand jury, where he implicated Abrams as the purchaser of the gun, William Fiscus as the party who used it in the killing of Jacob Young, and a woman of bad repute, named Frank Clark, as the female who acted as a decoy in enticing Young and his wife to Cold Springs that day, and the person who shot Mrs. Young with a pistol, Fiscus giving her the finishing touch by crushing her skull with the butt of the shot gun. He implicated himself, representing that he took no active part in the murder other than to go out and bring the woman, Frank Clark, to town. He also brought in the names of one or two other persons as being accessories, both before and after the act. As the greater part of his confession was lacking in material facts, containing implications that did not bear the slightest impress of truth, and therefore would not stand the test of a public investigation, the entire portion of it was in consequence, in the spirit of the law, negatived, and stood for nothing.

Hartman made several statements, relating to points upon which the public mind has been greatly agitated, in his confession, which have not yet found their way into the papers, and will not until the charge against Abrams is disposed of. The suicide of Hartman, on the 10th of March, and the subsequent sentence of Mrs. Clem, together with her removal to the penitentiary at Jeffersonville, are matters of such notoriety that no review of them is necessary.

THE CRUEL SOUTHERNERS.

An Unusual Case—A Jury Finds a Verdict Against a Debtor and Contributors to His Relief.

From the Augusta (Ga.) Constitutionalist, June 21.

In the Superior Court of Richmond county, yesterday morning, suit was brought by W. J. Vason, executor of estate of Turner Clanton, deceased, on a distress warrant levied against the property of a well and favorable known colored drayman in this city, Phillip Oliver, to the amount of $90.

The evidence developed on the investigation of the claim showed that a portion of this money had been turned over to the old mistress of the defendant, under her direction, but had never been applied to the legal payment of the claim in the hands of the said executor. Whilst a faithful servant had faithfully served their old mistress for the period of fifteen years. When the emancipation proclamation made him master of his own freedom, although disrupting the relation of servant and mistress, his fidelity, in a high moral sense, was even more prominent than when occupying the position of a trusted and confidential servant.

To his old mistress the termination of the war brought a sad reverse of fortune, placing her in a sad dependent position. For more than six months, this former faithful servant voluntarily contributed of his hard-earned savings to the relief of the necessities of his old mistress, thus attesting the high regard which he cherished for one to whom he had so long and faithfully sustained the relation of a servant.

While in the case at issue, the jury, under the law, were compelled to find against Philip, they accompanied their verdict with the following notice to Judge Hook, counsel for the defendant:

We, the jury, (Panel No. 1) beg leave to contribute the sum of thirty-one dollars to the defendant, in consequence of his gratitude and kindness to his late mistress. [Signed] W. J. OWENS, Foreman.

Judge Hook, likewise, with a liberal regard for his client, who had behaved in such a worthy manner, generously remitted his fee in the case.

Col. Claiborne Sneed, counsel for the plaintiff, announced that the sum named by the jury ($31) would be deducted from the amount of the verdict.

Thus we have another striking vindication of the patent truth, that whenever a colored man or woman so conduct themselves as to command the confidence and esteem of the white people among whom they have been reared, Southern men are not slow to make the acknowledgement in a substantial manner. This circumstance, although involving but a small amount, is worth vastly more to this defendant than whole volumes of the lying protestations of friendship which carpet-bag adventurers make to the credulous colored people, in order to subserve their dirty political purposes. Point to a single carpet-bagger in the State, who would exhibit like generosity under similar circumstances. One could be found.

We desire that other colored people may profit by the lesson which this incites. Learn to confide in your own Southern people. Preserve this record, and flaunt it in the face of the very next carpet-bagger who attempts to persuade you that the Southern people are not your best friends.

Another Arctic Expedition.

From the New York Express.

On Tuesday last, but few of our readers may be aware, an expedition for the arctic seas left this city very quietly and unostentatiously, the result of whose researches and labors at an early day promises to be of the utmost importance, not only to the scientific world, but to all who would know something more of that mysterious region than the various expeditions heretofore undertaken by Englishmen and Americans and the like. The party, headed by the celebrated Dr. I. L. Hays, Mr. W. B. Bradford, the artist, and Messrs. H. B. Broadwood, Dunnmore, Chickerson and Henry W. Dodge. Embarking on the steamer City of Boston, they will proceed to St. John, N. B., and there join the steamer waiting for them at that port to proceed to the Arctic Circle on a cruise which will probably extend till late in the autumn. The expedition has been provided with a very costly and complete assortment of scientific instruments, mathematical, philosophical and astronomical, which will enable the artists and savans accompanying it to take, among other things, photographic views of the various points of interest at which they may touch, thus bringing home to us exact copies from nature of such scenes and places, of which we have heretofore had only verbal descriptions, or such necessarily imperfect glimpses for the eye as the pencil of the artist could provide. Thus amply provided, there is every reason to anticipate, as the fruits of the expedition, such valuable additions to scientific discovery as will not only justify the large amount of money which has been bestowed upon it, but reflect lasting honor upon our fellow-townsmen, Legrand Lockwood, Esq., the eminent banker, to whose liberality the Spanish Minister that they intended to violate the neutrality laws.

A MINIATURE MARRIAGE.

A Little-Great Wedding—A Stray Skean Recaptured—Commodore Nutt and Minnie Warren.

From the N. Y. Sun, 18th.

Last and least of the happy consummations of true love which it is the Sun's pleasant prerogative to cast a beam upon, is the wedding of the redoubtable Commodore Nutt, of Lilliputian memory, to the charming little Miss Minnie Warren, so long his companion in the realms of the great Barnum's enterprise. Several years have gone by since that mythical little bird, which Mrs. Grundy has trained especially to spy upon the pranks of Cupid, whispered to that ancient dame that Minnie and the Commodore had fallen willing victims to Cupid's darts. Mrs. Grundy, however, had nothing to say at the time, for she argued that if ever a "match was made in heaven," if ever people were "made for each other," it was this Lilliputian couple. At last we are happy to be able to delight Mrs. Grundy with the announcement that Miss Minnie and the Commodore have been made bone of one flesh, of one flesh, and all the rest of it, according to the regulations in force in Ireland, about the time of this anniversary, was never more necessary than in the present year.

THE IRISH CHURCH BILL.

In the House of Lords to-night, Earl Grey gave notice that he should move to omit in the church bill that portion of the preamble which provides that the property or proceeds of said church shall not be held or applied for the maintenance of any church or clergy or other ministry, or for the teaching of religion.

NEW YORK.

OUR RELATIONS WITH BRAZIL.

Funeral of Henry J. Raymond.

The Yellow Fever at Quarantine.

Arrest of the Cuban Junta.

NEW YORK, June 21.—The following is a condensed account of Minister Webb's correspondence with the Brazilian government. In October, 1866, the American whaling ship Canada got ashore on the Garris Reefs, near the mouth of the Rio Grande Del Norte. Brazilian soldiers, in spite of the remonstrances of the Captain and crew, seized the vessel, and sent a crew to deposit the property in the Brazilian treasury. Recompensation was demanded by our Government. The owners renewed their claims in 1864, through Minister Webb, for damages and interest to amount of $400,000. Finally Minister Webb was authorized to compromise on $70,000, or one-fifth of the original amount.

On the 1st of June, 1867, the Brazilian Government rejected an offer on behalf of the Brazilian Government, rejected this offer on the ground that the Brazilian Minister at Washington had not advised his Government that he had been informed by Mr. Seward of having in view renewed instructions to the American Minister in Brazil, which would be fully informed of the facts to their own Minister. Gen. Webb wrote to the Barnum, protesting against his taking such absurd ground, and declaring that if it were maintained he should ask for his passport.

On the 1st of June, Minister Webb received a note from the English Secretary, stating that his discharge was intended to ward him, but that the American Government had not having announced to the Brazilian Minister in Washington the result of the promised reconsideration, nor for the issue of revised instructions, he had written to General Webb, requesting him to communicate to General Webb the result of his communication to the American Minister.

To his old mistress the termination of the war brought a sad reverse of fortune, placing her in a sad dependent position. For more than six months, this former faithful servant voluntarily contributed of his hard-earned savings to the relief of the necessities of his old mistress, thus attesting the high regard which he cherished for one to whom he had so long and faithfully sustained the relation of a servant.

From the New York Express.

On Tuesday last, but few of our readers may be aware, an expedition for the arctic seas left this city very quietly and unostentatiously, the result of whose researches and labors at an early day promises to be of the utmost importance, not only to the scientific world, but to all who would know something more of that mysterious region than the various expeditions heretofore undertaken by Englishmen and Americans and the like.

The party, headed by the celebrated Dr. I. L. Hays, Mr. W. B. Bradford, the artist, and Messrs. H. B. Broadwood, Dunnmore, Chickerson and Henry W. Dodge. Embarking on the steamer City of Boston, they will proceed to St. John, N. B., and there join the steamer waiting for them at that port to proceed to the Arctic Circle on a cruise which will probably extend till late in the autumn. The expedition has been provided with a very costly and complete assortment of scientific instruments, mathematical, philosophical and astronomical, which will enable the artists and savans accompanying it to take, among other things, photographic views of the various points of interest at which they may touch, thus bringing home to us exact copies from nature of such scenes and places, of which we have heretofore had only verbal descriptions, or such necessarily imperfect glimpses for the eye as the pencil of the artist could provide. Thus amply provided, there is every reason to anticipate, as the fruits of the expedition, such valuable additions to scientific discovery as will not only justify the large amount of money which has been bestowed upon it, but reflect lasting honor upon our fellow-townsmen, Legrand Lockwood, Esq., the eminent banker, to whose liberality the Spanish Minister that they intended to violate the neutrality laws.

A MINIATURE MARRIAGE.

A Little-Great Wedding—A Stray Skean Recaptured—Commodore Nutt and Minnie Warren.

From the N. Y. Sun, 18th.

Last and least of the happy consummations of true love which it is the Sun's pleasant prerogative to cast a beam upon, is the wedding of the redoubtable Commodore Nutt, of Lilliputian memory, to the charming little Miss Minnie Warren, so long his companion in the realms of the great Barnum's enterprise. Several years have gone by since that mythical little bird, which Mrs. Grundy has trained especially to spy upon the pranks of Cupid, whispered to that ancient dame that Minnie and the Commodore had fallen willing victims to Cupid's darts. Mrs. Grundy, however, had nothing to say at the time, for she argued that if ever a "match was made in heaven," if ever people were "made for each other," it was this Lilliputian couple. At last we are happy to be able to delight Mrs. Grundy with the announcement that Miss Minnie and the Commodore have been made bone of one flesh, of one flesh, and all the rest of it, according to the regulations in force in Ireland, about the time of this anniversary, was never more necessary than in the present year.
